EASTERN SHORE IS ARMED CAMP AS SEARCH CONTINUES

400 National Guardsmen and Troopers Seek Lynchers

4 TAKEN INTO CUSTODY

Will Be Given A Preliminary Hearing Sometime Today

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 28.—Maryland's eastern shore resembled an armed camp today as 400 national guardsmen and state troopers overran the country-side seeking members of the mob which on the night of October 18th lynched George Armwood, a negro who was held in Somerset County jail at Princess Anne.

Four alleged leaders of the mob were taken from their beds shortly after 3 a. m., charged with murder and held in the national guard station at Salisbury. The men are to be given a preliminary hearing today before Squire Edgar Jones of Princess Anne. The charges against the men were signed by Brigadier General M. A. Reckford, Adjutant General of the Maryland National Guard who, with Captain Edward McK. Johnson, led the search for the mob. Five other men are sought as members of the mob. Preparatory to bringing the prisoners to Princess Anne, Adjutant-General Reckford ordered several tons of barbed wire rushed from Maryland and marked a dead-line of one city block about the Court House. If necessary, the national guardsmen will string up their entanglement and barricade themselves behind it.

County Publicity Committee Now Permanently Housed

The Bucks County Publicity Committee is now permanently housed in its new offices at No. 84 North Main Street, Doylestown.

Rachel Nice Knowler, formerly of the Title Department of the Doylestown Trust Company will be in charge of the offices where plans are being made, under the direction of the committee, for an aggressive campaign promoting the interest of the County, its industries and all types of its business and farm life.

The committee emblem, which will be used on many business letter heads throughout the County, as well as on produce and manufactured material being shipped to other parts of the country, has been completed by Mr. Charles T. Coiner, Bucks County artist famous for having designed the N. R. A. Blue Eagle.

"The plan of action," stated John M. Dolph, Public Relations Expert, who is in charge of getting the work under way, "is to enlist the support of Committee leaders in every section of Bucks County in selling to that Section the idea of organized County Promotion."

Letters are going out to all foremost businesses and business men in each Borough and Township, explanatory of the work and asking their support.

The work to be carried on this year will use little financing, but it will need a great deal of careful organization on the part of those who believe in the idea and are willing to serve.

Visitors are welcome at committee headquarters where they may receive any information they may desire as to the work that is under way.

FINE 5 BOOTLEG COAL DEALERS IN PHILA.

Truck Helper Who Refused To Tell Name Gets 30 Days

WARRANTS FOR OTHERS

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—Fines ranging from $10 to $50 were imposed by Magistrate Thomas H. O'Hara upon five alleged bootleg coal dealers.

A young helper on one of the trucks was sentenced to 30 days in the county prison in default of a $10 fine for disorderly conduct.

He refused to give his name, remarking: "I don't know my real last name. I've got four or five last names. Which one shall I use?" He was slated as "John Doe" and taken to Moyamensing.

John Bedway, who with "John Doe," lives in Taylor, Lackawanna county, was fined $50 and costs for interfering with Bureau of Weights and Measures inspectors who stopped him and "John Doe" as they were unloading coal at a house at 742 N. 19th street, on October 23.

"These fellows refused to tell us where they got their coal or to let us weigh it," Morris Oppenheim, one of the inspectors, said. "Then as they got on the truck and started to drive off, this man (indicating 'John Doe') pulled a long club, about four feet long, out of the truck and swung it at me." Oppenheim said the other inspector, Joseph MacElwee, had gone for a policeman before the truck started to drive off.

The others fined are: William Muscales, of Frackville, Schuylkill county, $50 and costs, 200 pounds short on one ton order; Joseph Walters, 1726 N. Willington street, $25 and costs, 129 pounds short on two tons; Frank Striko, of Mt. Carmel, $25 and costs, 325 pounds short on four tons, and Frank Lewis, 1429 Ridge avenue, $10 and costs, for failure to furnish a delivery ticket.

Warrants were issued for Paul Hoffacker, 2636 N. 11th street, charged with being an agent for "bootleg" coal dealers; R. L. Reckless, 537 N. 60th street; Leo Staskiel, Mt. Carmel; Adam Stubovage, of Mt. Carmel, wired that he was ill, and a continuance was granted Thomas Blair, 665 E. Lippincott street.

Another man arraigned, Elmer Bitter, 5837 Cobly's Creek Boulevard, said he was only an agent for a coal dealer. He was given two weeks to produce the man he said was responsible for short weight.

Joseph H. McArdle, supervisor of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, warned that the sale of bootleg coal in the city is increasing, to the detriment of the public which buys the product in good faith.

"It's just a racket operated by a bunch of unscrupulous men who peddle the coal from door to door," he said. "I don't believe any of them have mercantile licenses to sell the coal."

"The bootleggers don't have a standard price for their coal. They just take any price they can get—usually about $2 under the market price charged by the legitimate dealers."

"The coal is sold in bags. Usually about 20 bags are supposed to make a ton. The bootleggers must rely on such means of measuring, since they have no facilities to weigh the coal. In lots of cases only 15 bags are sold as a full ton with the result that the person buying the coal gets cheated."

"This bootlegging situation has so far advanced that there are quite a few persons in town today who are

EXPLAINS MEANING OF AUTO LIABILITY ACT AND HOW IT WILL AFFECT THE AUTOMOBILE OWNER AND OPERATOR AFTER JANUARY 1ST

Not Required To Do Anything January 1 to Meet Demands Of the Law

SAY KEYSTONE OFFICERS

Motorists here are keenly interested in the new automobile liability act which becomes effective on January 1st and many are asking the question: "What must I do January 1 to comply with the Pennsylvania Financial Responsibility law?"

The answer, as given by the Keystone Automobile Club's legal department, is: "No motorist will be required to do anything on January 1 in connection with this law, but every motorist should thoroughly understand that failure or inability to pay a judgment in excess of $200 for an automobile accident occurring on or after that date will result in loss of both car registration and operator's license, which cannot be restored until the judgment has been satisfied and proof of future financial responsibility given."

"The motorist who is not protected by insurance or who has no other means of satisfying a judgment is, therefore, faced with the possibility of disbarment as an owner and operator in event of an accident, within the provisions of the law, after the first of the year."

Robert C. Kitchen, of the club's legal staff, further clarifies the status of motorists in relation to the law, in the following statement:

"Because the Financial Responsibility law becomes effective January 1 and because of almost universal misunderstanding of its provisions, motorists as a class are under the impression they must 'do something' to comply with the law on that date."

"As a matter of fact, no action of any kind will be required of motorists in connection with this law, unless they place themselves within the conditions defined in the act through accidents, violations of the Vehicle Code, or failure to pay judgments awarded as a result of accidents."

"Motorists who were not involved this year in two or more accidents, causing personal injury or property damage to others in excess of $200, will start 1934 with a clean slate, so far as the financial responsibility law is concerned. They will be affected by the law only if they come within its provisions through accidents, violations or failure to pay accident judgments in 1934."

"Those who have had two or more accidents in 1933, as defined by the law, will be required to show financial responsibility, either through insurance, surety bond or cash deposit of $11,000 with the State Treasurer."

"Their status will be determined when they apply for renewal of operators' licenses for 1934. In other words, the holders of operators' licenses for 1933 can continue to operate motor vehicles until midnight of February 28, 1934, when the present licenses expire. If their accident record for this year is such as to require them to show financial responsibility, they will be so notified when they apply for renewal of license, and so renewal will be granted until the law's provisions have been complied with."

The bag stolen from the automobile of Dr. George Zuccala, contained test tubes filled with millions of deadly typhoid germs, the physician informed police. Dr. Zuccala said each tube contained enough germs to plunge a wide area into an epidemic. He asked the thief to return the tubes, promising him immunity from prosecution.

Harrisburg, Nov. 28.—Passed by a unanimous vote in the Senate, the Buckman Bill setting up a market control board to regulate the dairy industry in Pennsylvania was before the House today. ### GOLD PRICE ADVANCED

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28.—The administration replied today to those critics who have been demanding abandonment of the gold purchasing experiment by again advancing the price of the yellow metal. The Treasury quoted $33.85 per ounce for gold today as against $33.76 yesterday, an increase of 9c. It furnished ample evidence that President Roosevelt is determined to proceed with his present monetary policy undeterred by criticism at home or by pressure from abroad. Today's advance was the first in a week.

JURY STILL DELIBERATES

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 28.—Surrounded by a silence through which no rumors or filters, the jury deciding the fate of Roger Toohy and his three alleged accomplices in the kidnapping of William Hamm, was still debating early today. The jurors, 10 men and 2 women, mostly farm people, show no signs of tiring although they have been shut off from all communication with the outside world since the trial began more than two weeks ago.

THIEVES' VICTIM LEADS THEM TO POLICE, ARREST

Pair of Amateur Auto Thieves Caught in a Peculiar Manner

STOLE ROBE, THEN CAR

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 28.—Two "amateur" automobile thieves were captured in an unusual manner Sunday when they were led to the police by the man whose car they stole.

The car belonged to Charles Happ, Doylestown real estate broker, and was stolen by Harry Weaver, 16, of Quarryville R. D. 4, and Leon Hershey, 17, Lancaster. The car was stolen while it was parked here, and after it had been wrecked by the thieves, it was abandoned at Chalfont.

Yesterday, before Justice of the Peace W. Carille Hobensack, the two boys were held for criminal court on a charge of larceny of an automobile. They were arrested by Chief of Police James J. Welsh, of Doylestown, who obtained confessions from both boys.

Saturday night an automobile robe was stolen from the car of Harold J. Barndt, Doylestown, while it was parked in Buckingham where Mr. Barndt and his wife were visiting friends.

Sunday morning Mr. and Mrs. Merlon Yerkes, with whom the Barndts were visiting the night before, were driving toward Doylestown and saw two boys walking along the highway wrapped in a blanket. The Yerkes' stopped their car.

"You boys stole that blanket," Mrs. Yerkes called out to the "knights of the road." "That blanket belongs to Mr. Barndt and you stole it last night."

"No, we didn't steal it, a colored guy gave it to us," one of the boys answered, but just the same, the blanket was turned over to the Yerkes. The boys continued toward Doylestown.

When they arrived here, Weaver remarked: "Oh, boy, there is a car with big jumbo tires, and I'd like to drive one like that."

They stole the car belonging to Charles Happ, who was inside a church attending service.

"We drove toward Chalfont about 55 miles an hour," Weaver told Chief of Police Welsh. "At the curve on the bridge near the town, we were going too fast and could not make it. The car hit the wall, jumped up on a pavement, sideswiped a tree and was wrecked. Hershey was thrown out of the car but escaped injury. Then we both beat it for the railroad tracks nearby and ran."

The wrecked car was reported to the Doylestown police and Chief Welsh went to Chalfont where a search was made for the boys. Two hours later the owner of the car arrived in Chalfont with his brother in another car. They drove around a few "back roads" and finally were stopped by the two boys.

"Can you give us a ride to Coatesville," Weaver asked Happ, never for a minute surmising that the stolen car belonged to him.

"Sure, jump in," Happ told the boys, and they did. Happ drove to Chalfont, where they met Chief Welsh, who had found a hat that belonged to Weaver. Chief Welsh put the hat on Weaver's head and it fit perfectly. The Chief questioned Weaver about the hat.

"No, I never saw that hat before," Weaver said. "What's the matter anyway, mister, did somebody steal something?" Weaver added.

Then Weaver admitted that he and Hershey had stolen the blanket and the automobile. Today it was learned from Charles Scarborough, janitor of the Buckingham school, that the two boys slept in the school Saturday night wrapped in the Barndt blanket, and that Scarborough found them there Sunday morning and chased them away. Police say that Hershey has a police record. The boys said they came to Willow Grove on a freight.

COUNTY BANKERS ADOPT CODE WHICH IS EFFECTIVE DEC. 2

Sixteen of the 20 Banks Represented at Meeting On Saturday

NOW UNDER THE NRA

Service Charges On Checking Accounts of Less Than $100 and $50

Sixteen of the 20 banks in Bucks county were represented at the meeting of the Bucks County Bankers' Association on Saturday at the Doylestown Inn, Doylestown, when a banking code for the county was adopted.

The new regulations will go into operation on December 2. They are practically the suggestions of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association, through the bankers' NRA committee for Pennsylvania, and are the new regulations and service charges for use in connection with "fair trade practices" now mandatory under the NRA banking code.

Honore B. Hogeland, of Newtown, president of the association, presided. Other members of the NRA committee for Bucks county include W. L. Leator, Riegelsville; J. Purdy Weiss, Doylestown; I. S. Worthington, New Hope; Thomas E. Coe, Langhorne; Raymond Johnson, Morrisville; Daniel Erdman, Quakertown; W. K. Terry, Perkasie, chairman.

The Bucks County Code provides for service charges on checking accounts of less than $100, and less than $50, with limited restrictions on the number of checks allowed, and providing for a charge of 3 cents per check additional when more than five checks are presented for payment for those having small balances.

The complete list of new regulations that will go into effect December 2 are as follows:

Banking hours—Daily from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., excepting on Saturday, from 9 a. m. to 12 o'clock noon and except on days recognized as legal holidays in the state of Pennsylvania.

Checking accounts—Adequate balances must be carried in all checking accounts. Otherwise a charge for services rendered will be made. Charges will be as follows:

(1) No charge for any month in which no checks are presented for payment.

(2) No charge will be made on the accounts of religious and charitable organizations.

(3) No charge will be made on accounts where a minimum balance from $50 to $99 is maintained, provided only five checks per month are presented for payment.

(4) On accounts where the balance falls below $100, a charge of 50c per month will be made, except as provided above. This

DEFEND SOUND MONEY

There can be little doubt that the principle of sound money has many more supporters than has any of the inflationary plans now being experimented with or urged upon the administration.

The sound money defenders, however, have not been as vocal as the inflationists. The possibility exists that this may be due to their faith in the President when he promised to do nothing to undermine the nation's monetary system.

That the time has come for them to change this passive attitude and adopt a more militant course is evident from the multiplying signs that the inflationists are making unmistakable headway in their campaign. Many informed observers interpret the President's gold-buying policy as a dangerous leaning in that direction.

With Congress soon to meet, the situation will take on a much more threatening aspect. Inflation sentiment is strong among the members of Congress. It is becoming evident that a formidable movement in behalf of inflation will make its appearance immediately on the assembling of Congress. It is not yet certain that it can succeed, but the situation has reached a point which demands that sound money defenders take the field if they wish to safeguard their cause.

Recognition of this apparently has been taken by the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York which has taken upon itself the task of organizing national opposition to inflation. Its purpose is to arouse the people to the danger confronting them and to make Mr. Roosevelt and Congress conscious of the fact that the popular will is opposed to dangerous tampering with the currency.

Sound money defenders need to become articulate. The chamber, in its campaign provides them a means of making their efforts count. It deserves and should receive immediate and widespread support and co-operation.

DEADLY

Carbon monoxide gas is deadly—doubly so because the victim receives no warning of its presence. A few revolutions of the motor will turn a small garage into a lethal gas death chamber. The gas is odorless and invisible. Chemists declare that less than three minutes is required to generate a lethal dose of the gas, even when the victim is strong, and that much less time is required to kill persons with less sound constitutions.

There is one motorist who need feel no fear of this deadly gas. He or she is the driver who opens the garage doors and a car window before starting the motor in a garage. Carbon monoxide gas never strikes in open quarters.

It is a great temptation, these cold mornings, to tarry a few moments in the closed garage and warm up the motor and car before backing out into the frosty air. Just how often this temptation is not resisted can be told by the increasing number of deaths due to carbon monoxide poisoning.

The contempt in which many persons are wont to hold repeated warnings is demonstrated by these preventable deaths. For a little convenience or a moment's comfort they risk their lives. You ask why. Why does a hunter drag his gun through a fence or use it as a walking stick?

SYNOPSIS

Young and lovely Patricia Warren employs the card skill she inherited from her late father to help support her stepmother and step-sisters by playing at bridge parties given by the wealthy Mrs. Eileen Sycoff. Pat receives fifty cents an hour. She declines the offer of Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, to make her his secretary and partner when, after taking her home, he tries to make love to her. Her nagging stepmother is furious at Pat's refusal. Later, at Mrs. Sycoff's home, Patricia meets Clark Tracy, her ideal, only to learn he is engaged to the socially prominent Marthe March. Pat is heartbroken. New Year's Eve, Bill McGee, a small-time politician and thug, insists that Pat accompany him to a dance. They stop at a rival racketeer's place where Bill demands settlement for infringement on his territory. He is shot and Pat flees in terror. Arriving home, Pat is put out by her stepmother who says the police are looking for her. Leda Frayne, a friend, offers Pat a home with her. After searching for work in vain, Pat enters a professional bridge game at the Hotel Beaucarne and wins $35. Jubilant, she returns to Leda. Phil Kennedy, Leda's fiancé, quarrels with Pat for gambling, and objects to her living with Leda. Pat rents a cheap furnished room. Later, disgusted with gambling for a livelihood, Pat tries to return home, but her stepmother will not allow her to stay. Patrolman Mallory warns Pat that Bill McGee has threatened her for running away when he was shot. Wally Edge, a bridge gambler, phones Pat that he has arranged a game. Arriving at the hotel, she is stunned to find Haverholt is one of her opponents. Patricia is nervous. Dorothy Luray, Haverholt's partner, suggests a stake of five cents a point.

CHAPTER TWELVE

Haverholt grinned satirically. "I think I should explain that Dorothy's notion of a small game is not five cents a point, it's nearer half a cent. She's putting on a bit of side for our benefit, aren't you, Dorothy?"

Dorothy giving him a furious glance, said, "I'm doing nothing of the kind."

"Are you sure that you want to play for five cents a point?" Haverholt asked Patricia, exactly as if his partner had not spoken. He added, "I assure you that Dorothy will bear up under a two cent game. How about two cents?"

Wally, wig-wagged frantically. Patricia said stubbornly, "Five cents suits me."

She began to arrange her hand. Wally shrugged but his eyes told her that the responsibility for the afternoon rested on her. Patricia studied her hand. It was a good hand. Some of her nervousness left her. For the first time she thought that she and Wally might win. Her confidence increased when they took the first rubber, a small rubber, with one bad set against them—Wally's fault.

The play went on, up and down, two rubbers, three rubbers; now Patricia and Wally were a little ahead, now a little behind. They were ahead twenty-five dollars when disaster overtook them. Haverholt opened with a bid of two hearts, his partner bid four spades, Haverholt bid five no-trump, his partner six spades, he ended the contracting with a bid of seven spades, the first grand slam bid of the afternoon.

Patricia passed. Dorothy Luray, looking a little frightened, passed. Wally drew a long triumphant breath and doubled.

"Redouble," said Haverholt.

Patricia passed, feeling that the end had come. There was nothing in her hand; the bidding made her sure that there was nothing in Wally's. Wally passed and Dorothy passed. A dead silence followed. No

At length Dorothy glanced inquiringly at Patricia, said tentatively, "I believe—"

Were they waiting for her? Patricia pulled the lowest of a worthless four card suit, dropped it to the table, heard instantly Dorothy's almost inaudible breath of relief, warning her of a fatal error. She looked up. Wally was staring at the card on the table as if it were his own death warrant. What was wrong? What had she done? Dorothy told her.

"You led out of turn," she announced sweetly. To Wally she said, "Lead a trump, please."

Patricia's face went white. She felt actually ill. Wally caught her eye and regarded her with loathing. Tense and set, his teeth clenched, he started to make the requested lead.

Patricia managed a shaky protest, "But, Miss Luray, you yourself misled me; you—"

"I did not," Dorothy glared at her. Haverholt glared at her. "Surely you know the rules of contract," he snapped. "My partner has the right to call the lead."

Wally led a trump. It was the only lead which would have saved the declarer. Dorothy discarded two losing clubs on the diamond suit, fulfilled her contract. Wally had no opportunity to make good his Ace of Clubs. He had doubled on that Ace; he said so viciously. When he saw the score he said more.

He said, "That bright play of yours cost me exactly one hundred and forty-seven dollars, Patricia." Pushing back his chair he added, "We may as well settle the score now; I've lost all I'm going to lose."

"I'm sorry," muttered Patricia. "What do I owe?" Wally asked Haverholt, ignoring the girl's wretched apology. Patricia ground her nails into her palms, sat still, very still.

"I make it one hundred and twenty-seven dollars," replied Haverholt. "If you will just pay," said Luray.

Wally settled his debt and stalked from the room. Patricia was left alone with Dorothy and Haverholt, left alone with a debt which she could by no possibility pay. She owed Julian Haverholt one hundred and twenty-seven dollars. She had in her purse fifteen dollars.

Patricia had never known such shame, such burning humiliation. Her throat throbbled. She sank her elbows on the table, tried to think of some explanation, some excuse, tried to think of something to say and failed utterly. Dorothy Luray stirred.

"Well," observed the victor, closing her pocketbook and adjusting her furs, "the game seems to be over."

Dorothy looked expectantly at Patricia. Haverholt was looking at her too. The time had come. She must explain now. Patricia drew a long, tremulous breath.

"I owe you some money," she said to Haverholt in a voice that seemed loud. She smiled waveringly. "I'm afraid I haven't that much with me. Would you—will you take an I. O. U.?"

"Certainly," he replied so swiftly and so unconcernedly that she was almost dizzy with relief. "Any time will do."

She wrote out the I. O. U., watched him pocket the slip of paper, experienced an overwhelming rush of gratitude. How easy he had made his acceptance! Dorothy Luray would have struck no such generous a bargain. She was not generous now. Her glance was hostile, contemptuous. Patricia did not care about the other girl now. She too, was ready to leave, ready and sick with her anxiety to escape.

"I'll run you home," offered Haverholt, rising. "My car is outside."

"What about me?" demanded Dorothy in quick, injured tones.

"I'll put you in a cab, my dear."

And that was the way of it. Not the way that Patricia would have chosen. She knew that the other girl was resentful and jealous. She was sorry that Dorothy did not have Haverholt's company. She would infinitely have preferred to slip off by herself, to try to wipe out the memory of the afternoon, to begin the long and bitter calculations that would go into her plans for the future. One hundred and twenty-seven dollars, a debt of honor, a debt that must soon be paid. If she moved to a cheaper place, if she skipped lunches, if she could borrow a little from Leda, if—

"A penny for your thoughts," said Haverholt, as they slid out into traffic.

"A penny is not nearly enough."

"Are you worrying about what you owe me?"

"Worry is a mild way of putting it," confessed Patricia, feeling easier now that matters were on a lighter basis. Dorothy's absence helped. After all, the sup was bright, the sky was blue. She was bowling along in a smart car. The heavens had not fallen. She glanced at the tall gray-haired man beneath the wheel and said frankly, "A hundred and twenty-seven dollars is a lot of money to me. Naturally, I'm worrying."

"You may stop immediately."

"I'm afraid I can't," Patricia told him levelly. "Within three weeks I shall pay you every cent."

"I wasn't going to suggest tearing up the I. O. U.," he returned. "Was that what you thought?" he inquired, enjoying her confusion.

Hot-cheeked, Patricia denied it. Naturally that was what she had thought. Julian Haverholt was a most surprising person.

"I shall keep your I. O. U. until you redeem it," he pursued, "for two reasons. For one, I'm sure you're not a welcher and for another I'm not in the habit of doubling for Santa Claus. I have no intention of changing my habits even when so charming a young lady as yourself is involved."

"Then I shall go right on worrying," Patricia put in dryly.

"But you needn't." The man paused, continued. "You said today that you didn't have the money with you. Have you got it any place else?"

"No," said the girl, low.

"And where do you expect to get it?"

"That's my problem, Mr. Haverholt."

"At the Beaucarne?" he hazarded.

"And what if I do? That's my concern too."

"Do you really like playing with the tin-horn sports, the quarter-on-a-corn gamblers, the has-beens and the never-will-bes. Why, Patricia, tell me why?"

She told him nothing. Her glance was stony. Haverholt persisted.

"Why not let me take you in hand? I'll show you how to earn a hundred and twenty-seven dollars in less than twenty minutes. I'm willing to overlook your rotten performance this afternoon. I still think I can make you into a real card player."

"You're very kind," said Patricia ironically.

"I have my moments of generosity," acceded Haverholt simply, seemingly missing the irony. "I'd like to teach you bridge that is bridge. You needn't be grateful. I'm more than willing."

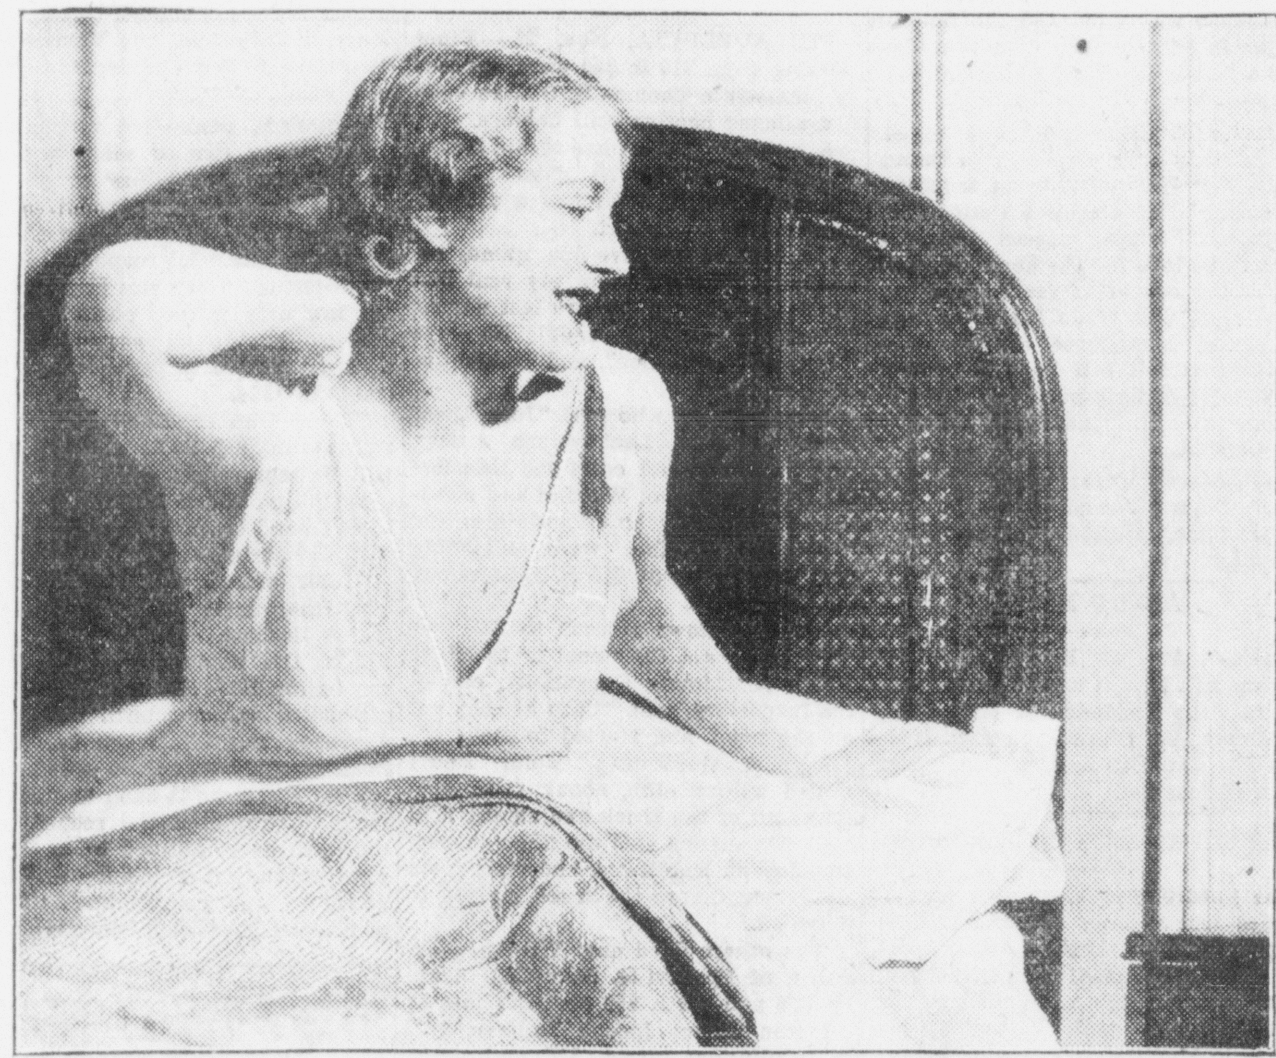

"Oh, are you?" said Patricia mildly. "And, what about me? Suppose I'm not willing?"

"It's a free country," remarked Haverholt and let the matter drop. His indifference disturbed her; gave her a curious feeling of let-down and pique. They drove on in silence. Would he really say nothing more? Apparently he would. Just that. For when he spoke he asked her where she wished to be dropped. Patricia informed him. Her tone was flat and tense.

THANKSGIVING!

Through the years certain traditions have grown up around the Thanksgiving feast. To be really authentic turkey should form the center of the menu. Turkey, golden brown, with its crisp skin covering, tender, succulent meat. Turkey filled with "stuffing" rich in sage, onions, chestnuts or oysters! Then, of course, there should be cranberry jelly, sweet and Irish potatoes, a green vegetable, a salad and final touch—mince or pumpkin pie.

SOME GOOD THINGS FOR THE HOLIDAYS

With these foods as a sort of basis for the arrangement of your menu, you may prove your versatility by introducing the dishes served in new and different guises, while still keeping to the tradition of the Thanksgiving dinner.

Usually Thanksgiving means guests and guests mean extra preparation, extra care that everything should be at its best. And in order to accomplish this happy end it's absolutely essential that the day should be planned—from start to finish. A week before the wise hostess will go through her linen supply and see that the best damask cloth is fresh and clean, the napkins, counted, folded and in order. She will count her silver and see that it is polished. Goblets should be counted so that any additions may be made in a leisurely way. The day before flowers should be ordered. And the day before that market list made out and checked against supplies on hand.

There are so many items that go to make up the menu that may be prepared beforehand so that the day itself will find the kitchen well organized and efficient in operation.

If you plan to serve cranberry jelly in little individual moulds you may prepare them a day or two in advance. Or you may serve slices of a very excellent jelly that is to be had ready prepared.

The day before Thanksgiving the turkey should be prepared and put away in the refrigerator but not stuffed until the morning of the feast. The dressing, however, may be prepared and put away in a bowl in the refrigerator. Giblets may be cooked and ground so that they may be added to the gravy at the last minute. Molded salads are easily prepared in advance. Pies may be made—and, if mince pie is your choice for dessert, that may be popped into the oven and heated just before serving. Pumpkin pie is better baked just long enough before dinner to allow for cooling.

Celery may be cut and cleaned and wrapped with lettuce leaves in a moist cloth. Then in the morning you will be ready to stuff the turkey—put it to roasting and clear the decks for the preparation of potatoes and green vegetables. It's not difficult, really, when you plan ahead. The menu for a typical Thanksgiving dinner follows:

Fruit Cup
Celery Carrots Olives Pearl Onions
Roast Turkey with Dressing
Giblet Gravy
Mashed Potatoes
Caramelized Sweet Potatoes
Cauliflower Holiday Salad
Cranberry Jelly
Finger Rolls Mince Pie
Coffee
Fruit Cup
Peel and remove segments of oranges, seed and halve green grapes, peel and remove segments of grapefruit, dice bananas and combine. Let stand in refrigerator until thoroughly chilled and serve in glass cups with mint leaves.

Oyster Dressing for Turkey

Four cups bread (softened), 8 tablespoons melted butter, onion juice, 2 tablespoons poultry seasoning, red pepper, 1½ dozen oysters and liquid. Mix the bread after it has been softened in water and lightly squeezed out with melted butter. Season to taste, being sure to add a dash of red pepper. Add the oysters and use enough of the liquid to make the dressing the proper consistency.

Caramelized Sweet Potatoes

One dozen small sweet potatoes boiled until tender. Peel and cut in halves and arrange in shallow baking dish. Boil one cup of water and one pint of brown sugar together for 10 minutes, then add one tablespoon butter. Sprinkle salt and cinnamon over the potatoes then pour the syrup over and bake in a moderate oven until brown.

Cauliflower

Drain a cooked cauliflower; separate into flowerettes and pour over the following sauce: Mix the yolks of two eggs, ¼ cup cream, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon nutmeg and juice of ½ lemon. Cook in double boiler, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Add 2 tablespoons butter, bit by bit, and when melted serve at once.

TROJANS SKID INTO VICTORY OVER YORK A. A.

Undaunted by the staying Sou'west-er Hand of old Jupe Pluvius, Bristol Trojans slipped and skidded to a 26-0 victory over the strong York A. A. at Eddington Field, Sunday afternoon. Even the drenched spectators, 1200 strong, were unable to leave the thrilling hypnotic play of their local eleven.

Using a great many of "Hokey" Leighton's new defense plays, the Trojans completely outwitted the swarthy visitors who outweighed them by more than 15 pounds to the man.

All of the scores, except one, came as a surprise and a grand thrill to the spectators. Both teams had played hard throughout the first quarter, and only one first down had been chalked up for the Trojans, and none for the visitors. Late in the period Mellor received the oval on a tricky play and snaked through the entire opposition for a forty yard run and a touchdown. Collins, who had been playing a hard game at tackle was pulled into the backfield to successfully kick a placement goal for the extra point.

All through the period the Trojan line held, with Phillips, McCurry, Scheffy and James showing well. Leighton and Stet Crossley made most of the gains in the line, though the slippery ground and wet ball held down the yardage and caused many fumbles.

In the second quarter the visitors found themselves on their own thirty yard line; to where Leighton had punted. In the three downs, they made but one yard against the line defense of Conn, Kutzer and Earnst, and prepared to kick. A bad pass from center went over the receiver's head and the ball rolled to the three yard line, where Mellor broke through and stopped the advance. The ball became the property of the Trojans on the enemy's three yard line. After two attempts through the line had failed, Barrett went around left end for the second score of the game.

And then came another surprise score. The kick-off was fumbled on the York A. A. 30 yard line, and was recovered by Hughes, leaving the pigskin in Trojan possession. On the very first play Leighton faded back to pass, changed his mind, and cut loose on a long right end run for the necessary 30 yards and six points. Again Collins kicked a successful placement for point. Score, 20-0, at the end of the first half.

The third quarter proved much the same as the first, minus the Trojan score. Both teams played hard, battling back and forth over a mucky turf with little yardage tabulated for either. Leighton came through with several long end runs, while Crossley and Mellor battered the line with little result. Gribbley, little 107 pound Trojan, played a wonderful defense game throughout the second half, as did Lewis, Hughes and Scott, new acquisition.

The last score came on the last play of the game. It was made by Stet Crossley on a line plunge for three yards. The Trojans had worked the ball up the field until "Chicky" Kutzer had nabbed a 20 yard pass out of the air and then Barrett had made a long end run to place the oval on the three yard line. One play left and the ball was handed to the powerhouse of the Trojan eleven, Stet Crossley, who brought the total score to 26.

Thus the Trojans carried on and added another scalp to their victory belt. Though the local team has been a subject for many side jibes and whispering jeers concerning the opposition they have met, there were none on Eddington field who had naught but lauding comment for the Blue Jerseys, for the grand game they put up. The opposition on Sunday was fast and swarthy and well-trained men played hard but to no avail against the clicking Trojans.

The Trojans will be seen in action on Eddington field on Thursday afternoon when they will meet the Colored champions of South Philadelphia. According to the report the visiting team has a line weight of 180 pounds and is undefeated this season, having only one score marked against them. Plenty of action is promised by "Hokey" Leighton, who has called his team out for a special practice in anticipation of the game.

Fine 5 Bootleg Coal

making a living from being agents for the bootleggers. These agents take orders and sell them to the bootleggers at 50 cents a ton.

"Recently a minor price cutting war has been started among agents, with some of them charging 35 and 25 cents per order. There is a regular clearing house for bootleg coal up around Ridge and Wissahickon avenues.

"In a recent case a man was arrested for being 3,500 pounds short on six tons. I would estimate that at least 1,000 tons of bootleg coal moves into Philadelphia every day.

"Of course, it's obvious that bootleg coal is impure. We found lots of dirt and stones among such coal. But we were powerless to act against anything but weight I suppose the State should take action against selling impure coal and the mercantile appraisers here should prosecute the bootleggers for selling their wares without licenses."
